SEATTLE UNIVERSITY PLANS GRAND RETURN TO IN-PERSON CLASSES FALL 2021
AS THE JIM AND JANET SINEGAL CENTER FOR SCIENCE AND INNOVATION OPENS

After a full year of virtual classes, the Jesuit institution announced April 13th the return of in-person class beginning in Fall 2021 in addition to the grand opening of the Jim and Janet Sinegal Center for Science and Innovation.

Located in the heart of Seattle's Capitol Hill neighborhood, the university classes are small in number but still plan taking serious safety precautions, noting that students planning on living on campus and attending these class must have proof of their coronavirus vaccination in addition to maintaining its face covering policies while on campus.

Not to mention, the Jim and Janet Sinegal Center for Science and Innovation will be open in time for Fall 2021 classes. The Center will house research labs and spaces for biology, chemistry and computer science majors as well as become the new home of KXSU, Seattle University's student-run radio station, and the Center for Community Engagement.

Registration has already begun for Fall 2021. For more information about Seattle University, the Center for Science and Innovation, and its coronavirus safety guidelines in-and-out of the classroom, visit seattleu.edu.
